One bad move nullifies 40 good ones, and precision technique is of the essence even when the game is well in hand. The same can be found in his book, "All About Chess", written in 1971. However, in the Chess Review magazine (November 1961), Al Horowitz calls this quote an "adage". Given this, I think that Al Horowitz is not the author of the quote, but thanks to him we know about it.
